

Monday, July 31, 1989

FACSIMILE: 297899 (Advertising/Accounts), 263616 (Editorial).

50 CENTS*

STARTS

Wayne and Donna at Suzuka earlier this year. PICTURE: BELOW: Donna and her bes at home in Albion Park preparing for Wollongong's year. PICTURE: Orlando Chiodo.

KIM TREASURE

Gay TV man's heartbreak

BROKEN

AFFAIR

KILLED

WARREN

WIN TV weatherman Ross Warren may have killed himself after his lover ended their homosexual relationship.

Jilted and deeply de-

KILLED

WARREN

WIN TV weatherman Ross Warren may have killed himself after his lover ended their homosexual relationship.

Jilted and deeply depressed when his lover dropped him for another person, Mr Warren most likely jumped into a raging sea off rocks at Bondi Beach.

Some police now believe that the love affair which went wrong may have been the motive for Mr Warren's decision to end his life.

Mr Warren was a member of the gay community, spending time in the gay bars of Sydney's Oxford St. Many of the TV personality's Wollongong friends were aware of his homosexuality.

Police investigating his disappearance have kept the lid on Mr Warren's private lifestyle. But sources reveal his homosexual links may be relevant to investigations.

Mr Warren, 24, disappeared in the early hours of July 22 after a regular weekend visit to stay with a friend in Redfern.

● CONT PAGE 2

● WIN TV's weatherman Ross Warren feared dead after his gay love affair ended.

are
ited
this
the
it, I ed."
11
and

es, forecasts and figures in 1991 to 6.9 per cent.

more impressive at the Society figures.

Broken heart may have killed Warren

● FROM PAGE ONE

The television presenter had a meal, telephoned a number of people, then left the Albert St flat about 11 pm to go to a bar in the Oxford Hotel, Taylor Square.

Mr Warren apparently met up with a friend, had a number of drinks and visited other bars before parting company about 2 am outside the Oxford Hotel.

He was last seen driving east in Oxford St.

Mr Warren was reported missing after failing to appear for work on July 23.

Two friends, knowing Mr Warren's habits, went to Bondi and found his Nissan sedan.

On Monday morning those friends spoke to Paddington police telling them of their find and a description was circulated, saying fears were held for Mr Warren's safety.

The same friends later searched rocks near the sea path from Bondi to Bronte and found Mr Warren's car keys on a rock ledge.

A sea, air and ground search failed to find any trace of Mr Warren.

The police air wing is currently carrying out regular patrols of the east coast looking for Mr Warren.

CLASSIFIED ADVER