STRIKEFORCE PARRABELL

RtQ Brief

Associate Professor Nicole L Asquith (Western)
Associate Professor Angela Dwyer (UTas)

Project Brief

Undertake an independent process and outcome evaluation of Strikeforce Parrabell's review of the deaths of 88 people (1979 and 2000) that are connected with the LGBTI community, contribute to the final report of Strikeforce Parrabell, and provide recommendations on policing policies and practices, including future directions for the GLLO program.

Aims & Objectives¹

Phase 1

- 1) Historiography of policing bias crime in NSW; NSWPF policies and approaches at the time of these deaths (SOPs etc); previous reviews and enquiries (including the Tomsen & Thompson reviews/publications)
- 2) Evaluate the process and instruments used to undertake the Parrabell evaluation
 - a) Why these cases, and what role has the selection criteria led to case exclusion?
 - b) Assessed against what criteria? Relevance of criteria to NSW law and NSWPF SOPs
 - c) Evaluate the role and process of community engagement
- 3) Review the 88 Parrabell reports in relation to the historic policing practices, including reporting mechanisms [Possibly triangulated against process tools used by UK hate crime scrutiny panels]

Phase 2

- 1) Review the 88 Parrabell reports against NSWPF Bias Crime SOPs, with triangulation against a second hate crime assessment tool (possibly London MPS)
- 2) Review original source materials, where required
- 3) Assess historic and Parrabell determinations (including changes in determinations) in relation to the selection criteria
- 4) Provide an independent evaluation report
 - a) Identify critical outcomes and determinations in these historic cases that affect existing policies, practices, SOPs, and police training
 - b) Provide evidence for further community engagement

Methods²

- 1) Informant interviews
 - a) Superintendent Tony Crandall
 - b) Parrabell team
 - c) Bias Crime Unit
 - d) Tomsen & Thompson
 - e) Others as required/recommended
- 2) Process analysis of Strikeforce Parrabell review process
- 3) Process analysis of policing practices in the 88 Parrabell cases
- 4) Case analysis of the 88 Parrabell reports (and source material where necessary) against two hate crime assessment tools

Reportables/Outputs

- 1) Phase 1 briefing to Parrabell (in person presentation)
- 2) Process Evaluation report
- 3) Phase 2 briefing to Parrabell (in person presentation)
- 4) Written advice
 - a. Recommendations for future policing, community engagement, training, and development of bias crime indicators and processes
 - b. Recommendations for future directions of the GLLO program
- 5) Strikeforce Parrabell Report
 - a. History of LGBTI-Police animosity, bias crimes and the policing of hate crimes between the late 1970s and early 2000s; scholarship on homicides of men thought to be gay or transgender, and policy and practice changes over this time
 - b. Concluding evaluation of Strikeforce Parrabell's process, methods, determinations, including critical analysis of limits of Parrabell, and any variance between Strikeforce Parrabell's determinations and the researchers' determinations
- 6) Community briefing on Parrabell (in person presentation)
- 7) Research article written in conjunction with interested SP team members

² These methods are operationalised in the budget and workload modelling below

Conflict of Interest

In the early 1990s, Dr Nicole Asquith was the Client Advocate and later, Client Manager at the Lesbian and Gay Anti-Violence Project. Two, possibly three, of the 88 cases were reported to the AVP during this time, and the AVP worked with NSWPF and the Homicide Victims Group to respond to these cases as bias crimes. In the 20 years since working with the AVP, Dr Asquith has forgotten all but the most superficial details of these cases, and has had no contact with family members since that time.

Ethics

As the researchers may be accessing identifiable information and undertaking informant interviews with key stakeholders, an ethics protocol (low risk) will be necessary, along with a confidentiality agreement with NSWPF (especially with regard to the source material).

Vicarious trauma is a very low risk given the experience of the consultants (see attached CVs) but will need to be addressed in the Ethics Protocol. This will be submitted to Western Sydney University HREC as soon as contracts have been signed and an initial briefing is provided by NSWPF.
