Strikeforce Parrabell was initiated by Operational Programs in 2013. The Bias Crimes Coordinator commenced reviewing and assessing over 80 alleged 'gay hate' crimes that were reported throughout the 1980s through to 2000. The purpose of this Strikeforce was to determine if sexual orientation bias was a motivating factor in the crimes, using bias crime investigation strategies. At that stage the review process was expected to take in excess of three years to complete given the current level of resources and staffing.

An initial report was completed during this period of the Strikeforce on the Northhead Beat in October 2013, and no further work conducted until the Corporate Sponsor, Sexuality & Gender Diversity and Commander Surry Hills LAC, relocated the Strikeforce to Surry Hills LAC and allocated a team of detectives to continue the work of the review.

Strikeforce Parrabell under the direction of Commander Surry Hills LAC has been underway since 30 August 2015 and is currently staffed by a team of 10 detectives, working full time.

1.2 History

'Gay' assaults and homicides have been a very visible and important part of the history of relationships between the NSWPF and the gay community. It has been well documented in research and literature, in this country and many others, that during the last few decades at least, it was not uncommon to experience or witness violence and crime perpetrated against men and women because they were perceived to be gay or lesbian. Men have been particularly vulnerable over the years and certain sites such as public reserves, beaches, toilets etc where men are known to frequent to meet other men, have been recorded as risky places where such crimes can occur.

Policing responses to these types of crime have also been documented in research, literature and media, as 'inadequate' or 'inappropriate'. This history is in fact one of the reasons why the NSWPF GLLO Program (Gay and Lesbian Liaison Officer) was established back in 1990.

This history does provide an important context for the work of Strikeforce Parrabell and the need to engage independent and qualified researchers to assist by providing advice and commentary on the methodology and conclusions of the Strikeforce.

1.3 Current situation

Strikeforce Parrabell is currently reviewing its 40th case and is expected to complete all cases by 15 August 2016. It is timely to engage suitably qualified researchers to participate in the final stages of the Strikeforce review.

At a recent meeting between the Strikeforce Parrabell team and Operational Programs staff, a process was agreed to by all to facilitate an expedient and effective conclusion to the work of the team:

1. Phase 1 completion by the Strikeforce Parrabell Team – reviewing each case utilising NSWPF Bias Crime SOPs, particularly indicators of bias crime
2. Submitting reviewed cases to the Bias Crime Unit, Operational Programs for review, particularly determinations (conclusions)
3. Invite the researcher/research team to collaborate with NSWPF to provide advice on reviewed cases, determinations (conclusions), methodology, language used and any other aspect of the Strikeforce Parrabell review (however, not on specific policing aspects of the review)

Prior to releasing any material or publishing results, adequate consultation will be conducted with families of the victims in each case and other key stakeholders (eg ACON, formerly known as AIDS Council of NSW and Alex Greenwich). Legal advice will be sought regarding publications of details.

There is significant media interest in the work of Strikeforce Parrabell and it is strongly suggested that the engagement of independent and qualified external researchers will add a completely independent perspective to outcomes and findings.

1.4 Challenges

One of the key challenges is locating suitable, qualified and independent researchers.

Many researchers in this area are connected to the 'gay community' and may not be as independent as desirable.

Some researchers have had their own personal history of negative relationships with police.

Other researchers are concerned about the highly political nature of this area.

Another challenge will be the sheer volume of original material that researchers may need to deal with. NSWPF will provide access to this material however, the volume is significant.

1.5 Time frames

1. 25 July 2016 – Send RFQ to selected parties
2. 5 August 2016 – Final date for responses to be received at Operational Programs
3. 8 August 2016 – Convene selection panel
4. October 2016 – Researcher/Research Team to start work

Schedule 2

Supplier's Quote

The Supplier will comply with the timeframes and milestones set out in the Gantt Chart below. This approach is open to negotiation to ensure it fits the needs (and time frames) of the NSWPF. The process is summarised as follows:

1. Request NSWPF to provide preliminary Strikeforce Parrabell findings [hereafter SPR] based on 88 Case files report [in a relatively concise form]
2. Focus group discussions (fact finding exercise): Derek informally interviews detectives and parties intimately connected with the Strikeforce Parrabell in NSW with a view to gleaning an appreciation of the manner in which the reviews took place.¹ [key focus: process and method used to conduct SP including application of bias crime indicators]
3. Derek to conduct analysis of preliminary findings arising from focus group discussions and exposure to initial Strikeforce findings. Derek to confer with Professor de Lint and Dr Tyson as required
4. Derek to provide detailed feedback on SPR to allow client to improve working understanding of review and hone quality and scope of SPR. This will be a two-way process with the view to clarify anything that isn't entirely clear and produce a clarity of understanding about SPR in its entirety shared by both parties.
5. Derek (and team) to write first draft of report in close collaboration with police as draft takes shape. The report will entail:
 - an Introductory section detailing historical context of policing during the relevant period
 - commentary on investigating deaths of men identified as gay and transgender during this period
 - a conclusion that comments on the efficacy and quality of SP's review and an unambiguous statement about whether the researchers agree with the SP outcomes and determinations.
6. Client reviews first draft and provides written feedback
7. Derek (and team) prepare second [penultimate] report
8. Both parties meet to discuss final amendments to report
9. Report finalised
10. If necessary, Derek to review original source material in consultation and with guidance from experienced detectives [about standard operating procedures]
11. Determine recommendations for future directions of the GLLO arising from the report
12. Meetings (3) across the duration of the project with Corporate Sponsor Sexuality & Gender Diversity and the Senior Programs Officer
13. Produce research article(s) for submission to appropriate quality journal [We envisage two quality articles attached to this review]

¹ NOTE: Officers will not be quoted in the report. These discussions are merely fact finding processes to aid in understanding what has taken place.

Note: Associate Professor Dalton will do most of the face-to-face liaising and Professor de Lint and Dr Tyson will assist with the analysis and preparation of written documents.
