SENSITIVE – LAW ENFORCEMENT

Operation MONARDIA was formally reviewed. It was found to be a thorough and comprehensive investigation.

Forensic Review

A forensic exhibit review was conducted. All exhibits for this matter were identified however of interest during the Coronial Inquest Detective Senior Constable VAN LEEUWEN from East Sydney Crime Scene Section states he saw a diluted blood-stained champagne flute located on the kitchen bench. This was photographed, reference photograph number 25. He refers to this item in his statement dated 13 August 1996 and in the Coronial Inquest that it was fingerprinted by forensic officers at the crime scene. There is no record of the champagne flute being retained as an exhibit or fingerprinted.

Forensic Results

An unknown male 'A' DNA profile was located on one of three condoms located within the crime scene and the same profile was located on a pair of green YSL underpants. Police do not know who owns the underpants. This profile has been run through the state and National DNA databases with no match. No other profile has been located.

As a result of re-testing exhibits, a further fingerprint has located on the outside of the frying pan. Unfortunately, both fingerprints (being from the inside wardrobe door and the frying pan) can only be compared if a suspect / person of interest has been nominated. As a result, the suspects / person of interests nominated from the original investigation have had their prints compared to the fingerprints located at the crime scene. No one has been identified.

Further exhibits identified

Paperwork from the deceased's wallet was examined. There were three phone numbers written down on a two-sided piece of paper.

Investigators have since identified the users of these phone numbers in 1995. Two phone numbers, both home and work belonged to [NP209] (DOB: [REDACTED] 1955) and the third phone number was used by: [NP210] (DOB: [REDACTED] 1950).

Investigations were under taken and [REDACTED] DNA was obtained POI [NP209]. Tests confirm [NP209] can be excluded from the crime scene. Enquiries confirmed a second POI [NP210] died on [REDACTED]. Investigators spoke with [1294] (nephew of [NP210]). He declined to provide his DNA sample to assist this investigation.

Correspondence with FASS

In March and April 2019, Dr BRUCE from FASS conducted additional testing with the DNA profiles (from the underpants and condom located at the crime scene). It was reiterated that the DNA profile could be compared to an identified individual. Dr BRUCE did conclude the DNA profiles are not suitable for familial searching or DNA phenotyping and are too limited for Interpol searching.

[NP214] confirmation as [NP215] alibi

In March 2018 investigators spoke to [NP214] who states he was at his home address in Woollahra with [NP215] (boyfriend of the deceased) on the weekend the deceased was murdered.

SENSITIVE – LAW ENFORCEMENT

NP214's version of events remained the same from when he was interviewed in 1995, confirming NP215 could not have left his home without his knowledge and reiterated he was confident NP215 was with him that entire weekend.

Apart from the new information being an unknown male DNA profile located in the crime scene and a fingerprint located on the frying pan, all other lines of enquires have been exhausted and this matter has been thoroughly investigated. As a result, this investigation was suspended in April 2019.

Strike Force Parrabell Findings

The matter of Kenneth Brennan was subject of review in the NSW Police Force Strike Force Parrabell investigation which examined a number of bias crimes. Strike Force Parrabell noted Strike Force Skarratt was open and examining the unsolved murder. They noted the level of violence in the crime was extreme, however indicated there was no other circumstantial indications of a bias motivated crime.

SCC 2016-0215*1. Terms of Reference:

To re-investigate the murder of Kenneth BRENNAN (DOB: 06/10/1941) on the 12 June 1995 at [REDACTED] Onslow Avenue, Elizabeth Bay.

2. Investigation Summary:

On 23 March 2016 Strike Force SKARRATT was allocated to Unsolved Homicide to re-investigate the murder of Kenneth BRENNAN in Elizabeth Bay in 1995. The scope of the investigation was limited to a forensic review of exhibits.

Murder of Kenneth BRENNAN at [REDACTED] Onslow Ave, Elizabeth Bay on 12 June 1995.

In June 1995 the deceased Kenneth Richard BRENNAN (aged 53 years old, DOB: 06/10/1941) lived with his boyfriend [NP215] (DOB: [REDACTED] 1953) at [REDACTED] Onslow Ave, Elizabeth Bay. Their unit was a one-bedroom and located on the fifth floor of the building.

About 7pm on Saturday 10 June 1995 the deceased and [NP215] went to a dinner at the home of [NP214] (DOB: [REDACTED] 1932) [REDACTED] Fullerton Street, Woollahra. [NP215] and [NP214] later provided statements to police where they stated the three of them had consumed some dinner and wine before engaging in sexual intercourse with one another and that about 10pm on the same night the deceased stated he was tired and left the unit.

At 9.49am and 2.45pm on Sunday 11 June 1995 the deceased withdrew cash from the same National Australia Bank located in Darlinghurst Road, Kings Cross. Black and white photographs were obtained and show the deceased to be standing directly in front of the machine with no other persons visible in both pictures. The deceased is dressed in the same clothing on both occasions. No monies were located within the crime scene.

About 5.20pm on Monday 12 June 1995, [NP215] returned from [NP214]'s unit in Woollahra to the unit he shared with the deceased. He told police that he gained access via the elevator and used his keys to enter the unit. [NP215] noticed the blood throughout the bedroom and saw the deceased lying naked on the floor of the living room.

[NP215] alleged that the deceased was dead at this time and ran to the Kings Cross Police Station to report this matter. Police attended a short time later and found the deceased on the floor of the living room with stab wounds. He had a pillow underneath his head and had been sponged down with a cloth that was left on the body. Blood was present in all the rooms of the unit.

The deceased was transported to the Glebe Mortuary and an autopsy performed later that day by Dr BRADHURST with Senior Constable Robert FORD from East Sydney Crime Scene Section also present. A number of photographs were taken, and various items were seized as exhibits. The autopsy confirmed the deceased died as a result of multiple stab wounds to the torso of the deceased, with the fatal stab wound being to the right side of the rib cage, which ruptured the diaphragm, liver and heart. The time of death was estimated between 5.30pm and 11.30pm on Sunday 11 June 1995.
