It appeared that at first looked as though NP242 had been assaulted. He displayed no physical injuries to the face, but on his right collar bone area on the frontal chest area he had a smearing of what appeared to be bloody when questioned about it stated that it was 'Ketchup'. Upon my observations of him he appeared intoxicated but upon speaking with Police who were taking his report on bail they stated that they could not smell intoxicating liquor. When asked he stated that he had not been drinking, he was lucid enough to recognise me, as I recently arrested him. It appeared to that he may have been under the influence
