Q. Would you now turn to that summary, and although I don't want you to read the entirety of that summary onto the record, I'd like you to go through each page and read out the relevant pieces that have not been indicated within your own statement, are you able to do that?

A. I'll endeavour to do so yes. About 4.30am on 23 December '94 Scott John Neilson who was in a motor vehicle stationary at the intersection of Campbell and Bourke Streets, Darlinghurst facing west observed three male persons standing around a man laying on the roadway on the northern side of Campbell Street near the intersection of Little Oxford Street at short distance from him. At the time they were seen by Neilson apparently removing something from his clothing after which they ran west in Campbell Street. Mr Neilson drove past and continued on in an effort to locate a police station and in doing so again saw the three men running across Crown Street, then turn west into Goulbourn Street. He continued into Oxford Street driving around the block and saw them again after reentering that street at which time they were walking west along the southern footpath east of Pelican Street. He subsequently spoke to police as was indicated and was driven around the area in an effort to identify the offenders.

About 8.30am he attended St Vincents Hospital as indicated and photographed the deceased who was at that time on a respirator and took possession of items of clothing.

Paragraph 4 (1) A post mortem examination was carried out by Dr Lillian Schwartz on 27/12/93 and a report was prepared in that regard on 12 April '94. A pathological summary indicating that the deceased had suffered - excuse me - the deceased had suffered fractures of both orbital plates and part of the left frontal bone, the left mandibular condyle and the left zygoma and diffuse brain damage. He also had bruising of the soft tissues of the neck with associated fracture of the right ..(not transcribable).. horn of the thyroid cartilage. He also had suffered oedema, congestion of the lungs, acute bronchopneumonia, pancreatitis and showed septic features in the liver, spleen and heart. Dr Schwartz indicated that in her opinion the injuries described were caused by a blunt instrument, the direct cause of death being head injury.

Pages 4 and 5 are relevant to the prime movements of the deceased which have been--

Q. Mentioned, thank you? Inquiries were subsequently carried out --mentioned. and established that the deceased had been in possession of a leather wallet, possibly an Artex brand and an unknown sum of money the previous evening and was believed to normally 10 carry some form of identification, however this property had apparently been removed from him at the time of the incident. It was initially believed that the deceased had been in possession of other property, including some compact discs and a bag containing some glasses, however it was 15 established that William McAllister had retained those items fearing his friend might lose them due to his state of insobriety.

20 On 31 December '93, paragraph 8 (20), a Mr Brad Smith of Umina was interviewed indicating that he had been in the company of another male, Mr Keith Lawrie, about ten days previously at which time they had been approached and threatened by three islanders of similar appearance to the suspects before Mr Dye's assault in Little Oxford Street and 25 provided detailed descriptions to police technicians who converted those to computer images, subsequently circulated by way of the news media with a view to obtaining information containing - concerning persons of a similar 30 description. Mr Lawrie was not available at that time, was not able to be interviewed to substantiate his friend's version of the incident. The release of this information resulted in a substantial response from members of the public and police and a large number of persons were subsequently interviewed, however with a negative result. 35 On January the eighteenth '94 Smith's associate, Keith Lawrie, was interviewed, however due to certain discrepancies between the two versions of the incident and description supplied, it was decided that less significance 40 be given to the face photos referred to.

Paragraph 8 (27) on 9 January '94 the brother of the deceased, Brentan Dye residing in Cairns, advised investigators that a wallet containing a Metway Card, previously reported as lost, had been recovered in that State. Although there was no report of the loss of theft to the police it was apparent that the deceased had mislaid the property prior to leaving to travel to Sydney and reported the loss of theft on his arrival here. His brother did however indicate the wallet was not one that he had presented to him as a gift in 1992, neither was that wallet contained in the property left at his home address in Cairns. Brentan Dye also indicated that he was unable to locate a gents diamond ring that his brother owned and believed that as he had previously pawned the ring with a local dealer, that may have been the case on this occasion. Inquiries were subsequently instigated with police in Cairns to carry out investigations with a view to locating the property, those inquiries were of a negative result as were inquiries made by - made of those persons in whose company the deceased was on December twenty two, none of them recalling any jewellery being worn by him.

Paragraph 8 (33) Mrs Jean Dye, the mother of the deceased, also notified the Task Force that she had information from someone who desired to remain anonymous to the effect that an associate, now resident overseas, was shortly before her son's death involved in a dispute with him over some 10 property and felt that perhaps he had been in some way implicated in the murder. This matter was pursued with Mrs Dye who was encouraged to surrender the identity of the informant to police so that the inquiry could be continued. Although it was only supposition it was considered the information may have related to a friend of the deceased, a 15 William McAllister, as he had moved to New Zealand on a permanent basis. Investigators pursued this matter with Mrs Dye, however she was unable to identify the source of the information or offer any further information and in the 20 absence of any evidence to support that rumour, the line of investigation was not further pursued. Investigators are of the opinion that robbery was the motivation for the offence due to the evidence available and there is nothing to suggest there was any premeditated action involved. 25

Paragraph 12 (4) in relation to inquiries regarding June fifteenth 1994 Task Force investigators, as was indicated, travelled to Kempsey where NP128 was further interviewed and although appearing somewhat erratic 30 confirmed the earlier assertion that he has witnessed the incident alleging he and | 1327 | rang from the scene in separate directions meeting at the latter's home shortly after. NP128 denied any complicity in the assault committed upon I116, although according to his account would have been in the vicinity about that time in company with 35 1327 . The witnesses to that offence had previously viewed a number of suspect photographs, including that of NP128, however failed to identify him as an offender. It was established that NP128 had been residing with relatives in 40 Moree prior to travelling to Kempsey and searches were carried out of premises in both places with a view to obtaining physical evidence, however with a negative result. Although modifying his account at various times during the interview, NP128 alleged he travelled to Moree by train 45 probably arriving around 25 December and supplied various names under which the ticket may have been purchased. However despite substantial inquiries being carried out with the State Rail Authority, police were unable to confirm or refute his mode of travel. On June 16 NP128 was sentenced to six months imprisonment at the Port Macquarie Local Court in 50 respect of other matters. During the interview NP128 indicated that he had been living in Sydney for some months prior to December '93 and various relatives with whom he had been residing were subsequently interviewed with a view to clarifying the position in that regard. His grandfather, 55 1321 , seventy two old, indicated that he recalled the boy being in possession of a rail ticket for travel between Sydney and Moree and stated that he had loaned him a sum of eighty dollars at the time from which bank records

staying with his grandfather, he had been staying with friends in and around the Woolloomooloo area. Inquiries made by police in Moree established that according to his Aunt 1821 he arrived on foot in that town in early hours of 11 December '93, which is in conflict with the evidence of that of his grandfather and that of his mother, 1923 who alleged that he arrived at her sister's home in the evening by taxi. 1824 produced a diary with an entry she alleges relates to his arrival on the eleventh and claim that following his arrival in Moree he commenced employment with her brother-in-law, 1828 a local rural contractor as a cotton shipper. Following prior arrangements having been made with him to do so with a view to clarifying certain aspects of the inquiry and accompanying investigators to the scene, 18728 was further interviewed at Surry Hills on July the sixth as has been indicated. However at that time alleged that he had previously been mistaken, since realising that he was not in fact in Sydney on 23 December and that the incident to which he had eluded, had occurred some time previously in a different location. He further alleged that another young person named 170 had purchased a rail ticket in that name at Redfern Railway Station around 10am in the morning and that he travelled to Moree later the same evening. Whilst he was unaware of the date, he initially stated it was about a week after having borrowed the money from his grandfather and that he had lost the original ticket, the one being purchased by 100 being a replacement. He subsequently recounted that he had been working with 1925 stating that he had been paid on a daily rate by cheque, those subsequently being cashed at a local Moree Hotel. He also alleged that he had made application to the Department of Social Security for benefits on 20 December receiving his first payment four days later. Inquiries made with that Department confirmed that this appears to be the case, although police have been unable to authenticate due to privacy le	available he believed to be on 15 December '93. His uncle, [1322], with whom [NP128] had been employed for a time, indicated that his services were terminated on 22 December '93 and inquiries indicate that whilst in Sydney and not

Whilst he was unaware of the date, he initially stated it was about a week after having borrowed the money from his grandfather and that he had lost the original ticket, the one being purchased by W0 being a replacement. He subsequently recounted that however indicating that he could not specifically recall the relevant times and dates and confirmed that he had been working with W125 stating that he had been paid on a daily rate by cheque, those subsequently being cashed at a local Moree Hotel. NP128 alias, or NP128, worked over three separate periods during that time being paid on each occasion by cheque, one having been cashed at the ANZ Bank, one at the Moree Hotel at the other at the Moree Services Club. Inquiries were carried out in relation to the latter as it is the normal procedure undertaken at that premises when a member cashes a cheque, for that person's membership number to be recorded on the rear as would be the recipient's signature. However for	5
some reason this was not the case on this occasion, there being no such number or signature appearing thereon. Club records indicate the cheque was cashed at the club on 8 January 1994, as was another of 1325 's cheques in the	10
amount of four hundred and fifty five, however there was no record of 1325 or NP128 alias signing the register for that date. Inquiries indicate that the only cheque on that date in that amount was cashed at the club by a member, named Claude Richens, on behalf of one of 1325 's employees,	15
Max Roberts. However when interviewed Richens denied any knowledge of either NP128 or NP128 alias stating that he went to the club on his own, cashed the cheque and left, not assisting in cashing a cheque for any other person. One of	20
the cheques allegedly paid to NP128 relating to work carried out on 16 and 17 December '93, has a signature on the back, which although not fully intelligible, appears similar to those signature - to some signatures of NP128 available from receipts to audio - numerous audio tapes supplied to him	25
following the three interviews with police. However inquiries made with the Document Examination Unit, indicate that a proper comparison is not possible as the signatures relate to two completely different names, NP128 and NP128 alias. The teller, Beverly Cribbs, has no independent recollection of the transaction and cannot identify the person carrying	30 out the transaction. The cheque relating to employment allegedly undertaken during the period 20 December to 24 December '93 inclusive was cashed at the Moree Hotel on 24 December '93, however due to the large number of employees cashing 1325 's cheques during the cotton	35
season, staff at the hotel are unable to verify the identity of those persons doing so on an individual basis. Statements obtained by 1325 and other family members however do appear to confirm that NP128 alias is identical with NP128 and that he was in fact in Moree on 22, 23 December,	40
therefore could not have been involved with or have been witness to the assault upon the deceased as he originally indicated. The evidence of NP128's uncle, 1326, in particular confirms that he conveyed his nephew to and from the properties on which they worked during the period relevant to this inquiry. Whilst in Moree the legal	45 relevant to this inquiry. Whilst in Moree the legal representative of NP128, solicitor contacted investigators and indicated that her client would not be taking part in further interviews, nor would be giving permission for police to peruse his Social Security Records as had been previously requested through his Welfare Officer at Cessnock Penitentiary.	50

Tracey Randall, of the Aboriginal Legal Service. As indicated Mrs Randall indicated that her client would not take part in a formal interview. When questioned however confirmed that he had in fact purchased a ticket for NP128 at Redfern Railway Station alleging that he had given him the money, about twenty six dollars, and requested the ticket be purchased in the name of NP128 alias , as he	5
was wanted by police and desired to get away from Sydney. 170 alleged that he had no knowledge of the reason for NP128 being wanted, however it is known that he had smashed a window of a Social Security Office in Surry Hills and had breached the Community Service Order for which he believed his arrest was desired. He indicated that whilst he could	10
not recall the specific date of purchase of the ticket, is adamant that it would have been two to four weeks prior to Christmas '93, which is consistent with what NP128 alleges to be the case and places him out of Sydney at the time of the offence. Inquiries were subsequently carried out by the	15
Administrative Officer, Reservation Department, Country Links State Rail Authority, however no record of the purchase in the name of NP128 alias was found at that time during the perusal of the manifests available, those being in respect of the dates 17, 18, 19 and 20 December	20
only, no others for that month are on record at that Department. There are various discrepancies and there appears no specific reason for NP128 to have made the allegation to police of having been present or in the	25 vicinity of the assault upon Mr Dye. However owing to the inquiries carried out, as indicated, there's no evidence to substantiate charges in respect of NP128 concerning the matter.	30

A. That's correct. I can indicate that since that time I have instigated inquiries at Redfern Railway Station and recently spoken to the Booking Clerk there and as a result of a search of records held at that station, can indicate	5
that the records show the purchase of a railway ticket on 3 December 1993 by a Master - I think it's NP128 alias of the sum of thirty one dollars which is indicative of that person being a youth and a statement has been obtained, a copy of the record and the rail ticket also of the person.	10
Q. The Booking Clerk's name is David McKewan? A. That's correct.	15
